
For decades, the peace between cats and dogs has been maintained after their last collaboration, but all that is about to change. Cats have always been known for their luxurious lives and their ability to captivate humans with their charm. However, the dogs have grown increasingly resentful of their feline counterparts, believing that they are taking advantage of their special status. A radical dog leader has emerged, vowing to rid the world of all cats in a campaign of genocide …